GigaMedia Partners with EA and Tencent in China for *NBA STREET Online

“Dream Team” Partnership will bring Top Sports Title to Giant Marketplace: a “Monster Slam Dunk”

HONG KONG, July 17, 2008 – GigaMedia Limited (NASDAQ: GIGM) announced today that it has secured an exclusive license to offer in China the highly anticipated EA SPORTS™ title NBA STREET Online, an exciting new sports game from Electronic Arts Inc. (NASDAQ: ERTS), the world’s leading developer and publisher of interactive entertainment.

In addition, GigaMedia and EA have entered into a strategic marketing partnership with Tencent Holdings Limited (“Tencent”), a leading provider of Internet, mobile and telecommunications value-added services in China.

“No one delivers sports action like EA and no one has a larger or more active community than Tencent,” stated GigaMedia CEO Arthur Wang. “The partnership of Giga – the leading online sports game provider – with EA and Tencent is truly the Dream Team of online games in China.”

NBA STREET Online is a real-time, multi-player online version of EA’s phenomenally popular NBA games series, featuring fast-paced street basketball action with today’s biggest NBA superstars, all in true-to-life detail.

NBA STREET Online addresses a huge fan base in China, which already represents the largest NBA market outside the United States with an estimated 300 million Chinese playing basketball – making it the favorite sports game among China’s youth, according to the NBA. NBA.com/China has rapidly become one of the most popular sports sites in China and NBA is consistently the most searched sports term on Baidu.com, the top search engine in the nation.

“We are honored to partner with EA, the NBA and Tencent to bring the incomparable action, style, and excitement of NBA basketball to China in EA’s brilliant new game,” stated GigaMedia President Thomas Hui. “For the 300 million basketball players and millions of gamers in China, EA’s NBA STREET Online is a monster slam dunk.”

“We are very pleased to have top game provider GigaMedia and top Internet company Tencent as our partners for NBA STREET Online in China,” said Jon Niermann, President of EA Asia. “Basketball is one of the most popular sports in China and with this powerful partnership, we are confident we have a winning formula for NBA STREET Online in the market.”

GigaMedia’s leadership in online sports games and entertainment and Tencent’s position as China’s largest Internet service provider provide this partnership with unprecedented market understanding and resources to launch NBA STREET Online in China and drive strong growth. The partnership will enjoy the unmatched reach of the Tencent community, with over 318 million active user accounts on its QQ instant messaging platform as of March 31, 2008.

“We are pleased to join GigaMedia and EA to promote this exciting, world-class product. We believe this game will provide a wonderful sports gaming experience for our users, complementing the large collection of games we already have on our gaming platform. This is a great example of our effort to explore various partnership models with other successful online game companies in providing the best gaming experience to users on our gaming platform,” stated Tencent President Martin Lau.

GigaMedia has exclusive rights to offer NBA STREET Online in China for three years.

The agreement follows GigaMedia’s previously announced partnership with EA to operate NBA STREET Online in Taiwan, Hong Kong, and Macau, and that of GigaMedia’s affiliate Infocomm Asia Holdings to operate EA SPORTS™ FIFA Online 2 in Asia Pacific.

NBA STREET Online was co-developed by EA Canada and Neowiz Games. NBA Street Online is expected to launch in China in the fall of 2008.
